The terrible affair, as narrated by the citizens of Irvine, is about as fol lows: Capt, Park, the town marshal, being a man of iron nerve and un dannted courage, sought to break up a habit among the young men of creating public disturbances, such as firing pis-tule and guns on the street. This res-triction of their liberties did not seem to meet with their approbation and they in tura decided to annoy the officer, with a view of either, testing his courage or of bringing on trouble. At least it was confidently predicted fwo months ago that there would be big trouble soon at Irvine and somebody would get hurt. The feeling of diequie and danger seemed to pervale the place. On the evening of the tragedy about dusk, Capt. Park, was standing in front of Bert Powell, s store when two shots from the other side of the street were fired, the bullets striking near Park and causing Powell to retreat for safety. Park, evidently believing he was the target of the assaltants, did not wait for a second attack but raised his shot gan and emptied both barrels at two figures just visible in the twillight across the street. His aim was good Whereas, death has removed from and two men fell, Asheraft pierced and two men fell, Asheraft pierced averal balls, and Wallage bar loved teacher, Miss Alice Arnold, there-wounded It is said that Park inner oncensus of opinion seemed to be that Governor Taylor had made a grave ty, is any at the head of a flourishing mistake in granting it so quickly and apparently with so little consideration.

acute appendicitis was advanced more than by all previous knewledge combined, by McBurney when, in 1889, he discovered and established the value of 'McBurney's point.' The introduction and elaboration, in 1894, by Edebuhls, of the palpation of the vermiform uppendlx finally placed us in a position to diagnose clearly and positively every case of chronic, and nearly every case of acute appendicitls."

Although there has been a belief that men were more subject to the disease than women, in a succession of 18,000 autopsles appendicitis was found in 57 per cent. of the females and 55 per cent of the males, and in 128 antopsies reported by another man! evidences of past appendicitis were found in 66 per cent, of the women and 56 per ceut, of the men. In 300 autopsies 190 normal appendices were found, all the others showing evidences of 1 Pase. Edebohls finds, clinically, mat 4 per cent. of all women have appendicitls. The appendix averages a half inch ionger in women than in men. Several hundred autopsies have showicas high a proportion of cases no above 21 per cent. where the appendix is abliterated. There is only one well authenticated case of congenial absence of the appendix. Odd reason for the happiness of the unclents seem to appear in the statement that the very existence of the appendix does not seem to have been recognized prior to the sixteenth century. There is one genuine record of left-sided appendicitis, but it was the case of a soldier whose body showed other transposition The first operation for appendicitis, so far as the records show, was in 1759. That was for the purpose of draining appendlx. The inauguration of the appendix itself was planned by Dr. Mahomed and executed on August 24,1883, by Symonds. Muhomed diagnosticated a stone in the appendix Symon Is removed the stone, three-fourths b. one halt inch in size, and closed the opening of the appendix. The patient recovered and was cured of all his symptons. In connection with this case Symonds becomes prophetic in short of its removal. Kroenlien on February 14, 1884, performed the first

The first successful removal of 1886, and "thereafter," Dr Edebolils says, "removal of the appendix in acute appendicitls rapidly became a recogplzed and oft-undertaken procedure. As early as 1889, McBurney reported seven appendicectomies of his own, Since that time scores of operators number their appendicectomies for acute appendicitis by the hundreds. Since 1890 the large majorities of surpendix whenever feasible. and vainly attempting to stem the tide, we find Dr. J. M Barton, of Philadelphia, as late as cently, preaching the doctrine of leaving the appendix in operation for acute appendicitis, claiming better results from this practice. That this claim does not hold good in the work of better operators goes without saying." AFTER reading Bob Breckinrldge's statement upon the decision of the Commissioners, we are prouder than ever that we supported this Grand Old
